

DECY CITY'S ARCHITECTURE

REPUBLICAN CLUB-TOLD CITY HALL PARK SHOULD BE SACRED.

Arnold Brunner Attributes to America the Art of Covering One Material with Another to Make It Look Like a Third—A Police Palace of Gayety.

For the most part the speakers at the Saturday discussion luncheon of the Republican Club yesterday decried the architecture of modern New York. The subject was "Modern Architecture in New York and Some of Its Specific Problems."

Arnold W. Brunner, president of the New York chapter of the American Institute of Architects, opened the discussion with a few definitions of American architecture. "The art of covering one material with another to make it look like a third," was one, and another, or rather a comment, was "American humor teaches its height in American architecture." He said that the city was sliding backward in a general way, and that the general scheme in its building, no matter between buildings, "is an instance of the method of procedure in Paris. There, he said, they have a general plan all completed in relation to a civic center, and when they have money to build new buildings they simply carry out another section of the plan. Mr. Brunner said he had no use for the phrase "the city beautiful." His ideal city was one of health, sense and practicality; after those the beauty could easily be added. He regretted the want of approaches to some of our large buildings.

Governor Arthur brought up the subject of the new city hall. "With the new municipal building," he said, "the new Court House, City Hall Park will be lost, and that must not be, for every inch of park space in New York is sacred to its welfare. Even highways at the cost of parks would be a doubtful blessing. Why do we want to constrict the lung power of our city which is to-day spending millions in its warfare on tuberculosis?"

The Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer had some words on the subject of the ethical responsibility of architects. He thought that the "tenement house crime" and the congestion difficulties might be overcome if business interests would allow. "The architects are not to blame for what they build," he said. "They are martyrs to their trade, they have to go ahead and build what they are told, and so they drive for the advancement of the business interests of their clients. If they are told to build a block which will give accommodations for 6,000 people they must do so. We cannot expect them to give up their profession for their ideals."

Stewart Barney was very much amused at the new Public Library at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue. He said: "The columns on the Fifth avenue front remind me of so many frost-bitten sunflowers leaning against a fence." Then he went on to the new Police Headquarters. "There is no more solemn place than a police station," he said, "and yet that building looks from the outside like some palace of gayety." The new theatre came in for a share of his scorn. He said that everything he had ever seen was a copy of European ideas produced many times larger. "Monumental is our idea when in God's name does monumental mean?"

The story of the first skyscraper here was very interestingly told by Bradford Lee Gilbert, who had the honor of designing the steel structure at 30 Broadway. He said that they had an eighty mile gale soon after it was completed and he had to go up and stay on the roof to show his own faith. He even went so far as to "take office" on the top floor of the building and his client that it was safe. He said the building never has blown down. Commissioner Stover was decidedly against the City Hall Park as the site for the new court house. He said that for the value of the site there we could purchase as good a site near by and he was for the preservation of every bit of park space we had.

Don Barber, president of the Beaux Arts Society, proposed a new city department especially for the purpose of looking out for the future arrangements of the city's growth, so that there need be no more ten minute "New York" decisions when a new building was needed. Robert D. Kuhn said that fifty families, mostly of the richer class, were housed last year in private houses while 20,000 were housed in apartments and tenements, and he said that except for certain legal restrictions as to air and sanitation these tenements were being built just as carelessly as they were thirty years ago. Mr. Brunner closed the session with a promise that the architects would be ready with their help when it was asked for to make a better city.

ROAD CONGRESS AT BRUSSELS.

Invitations Sent to American Governors to Appoint Delegates.

Invitations have just been sent to the Governor of each State and Territory of the United States and to the Governors of the various Canadian provinces requesting them to appoint delegates to the second international road congress, to be held at Brussels July 31 to August 7.

The invitations were sent out by the American Road Builders Association, represented by representative in America of the Permanent International Road Association, formed at Paris in October, 1906. At the time of the first international road congress, at the annual meeting of the American Road Builders Association, it was appointed to make arrangements for the American delegates, who attended the congress. This committee consists of Samuel Hill, Seattle, Wash., chairman; J. H. Campbell, Ontario, Canada, and E. J. Rogers, New York city. Mr. Hill visited in Europe recently and made all arrangements for the accommodation and entertainment of the American delegates and arranged that the congress should have an English speaking section.
